Co-washing, also known as “conditioner-only washing” or “conditioning wash” is popular for those with curly hair.

The original Curly Girl Handbook specifically advocates for washing curly hair only with a specially formulated conditioner. Washing with a conditioner is much gentler on curls than shampoo and does not strip the hair of natural oils. When you co-wash, you should scrub and work the product into your scalp to remove build-up and dirt. If the cowash does not properly cleanse your scalp, you may need to clarify regularly. Cleansing the scalp properly prevents blocked follicles and itching. Cowashing is not recommended for everyone, so be sure to read the CO-WASHING AND SHOULD YOU DO IT? article on the Absolutely Everything Curly website.

A co-wash is typically not formulated the same way as a regular conditioner and is designed to clean the hair and moisturize it at the same time. Thus, many curlies choose to use a specially formulated cowash instead of a regular conditioner. If you use a cowash, you can skip a conditioner and go straight to a leave-in conditioner or a styler, such as a mousse or a gel.

There are many co-washes to choose from. This Guide mentions over 50. We have also indicated which contain protein, aloe, or coconut, are good for low density (thin) or high density (thick) hair, and which are Curly Girl approved for those following the CG Method.
